

RUSSIAN ARMIES SURGING FORWARD; DRIVE MAY MARK BEGINNING OF END OF NAZI MILITARY MIGHT IN RUSSIA

Flushed With Spectacular Successes at Orel and Belgorod, Red Army Troops Smash Way Through German Lines Along A Wide Front — Threaten Ukrainian Industrial City of Kharkov, Also Bryansk

By International News Service
Triumphant Russian armies surged forward along the entire southern front today in a mighty drive that may mark the beginning of the end of German military might in Russia.

Flushed with the spectacular successes they scored at Orel and Belgorod, Red Army troops smashed their way through German lines along a wide front and threatened the great Ukrainian industrial city of Kharkov and the important railway hub of Bryansk.

One Russian force actually outflanked Kharkov by cracking its way into Zolochiv, 30 miles to the northwest, cutting the railway that runs to Bryansk and thence to Moscow. Advancing along a 43-mile front, the Soviets gained as much as 37 miles in the big push west of Belgorod.

In the drive on Bryansk, vitally important Nazi-held anchor on the central front, other Russian forces captured the town of Kromy, 35 miles southwest of Orel, recorded gains of more than six miles and liberated more than 70 inhabited localities from the clutches of the invaders.

In official quarters, the twin victories which resulted in the recapture of Orel and Belgorod were hailed as blows that have "finished Hitler's last adventure."

Allied successes in Sicily were not quite as spectacular as those registered by the resurgent Russians, but important new gains were made.

The American Seventh Army commanded by Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., appeared to be bearing the brunt of the fight as it hammered German defenses in the Troina area in northern Sicily while the veteran British Eighth Army pressed forward into the foothills around Mount Etna.

Despite a terrific aerial and artillery bombardment, the Germans in the Troina area were putting up a desperate battle against the Select Place To House The Fire Apparatus for New Co.

The meeting held Thursday night by members of Bristol Volunteer Fire Co., No. 6, was well attended. A letter was received from Burgess Clifford L. Anderson in which it was stated that the agreement of the company would be submitted to Borough Council at a meeting Monday night. It is expected that council will immediately approve it.

It was voted to house the apparatus in the property of Mr. Fandozzi, 1816 Farragut avenue.

Chief Engineer Jolly will arrange to train men in the use of the apparatus as soon as it has been assigned to the Company by the Borough.

"Molly Pitchers" Here Sell $6,000 in Stamps, Bonds

Molly Pitcher tag day was a great success in Bristol. Sales of bonds and stamps on the streets of the borough, and in the industrial plants exceeded all expectations.

The Junior Misses sold over $1000 worth of war stamps, and $5000 worth of war bonds in Bristol borough yesterday, when Molly Pitcher tag day was observed.

"The juniors portrayed a true symbol of Molly Pitcher by working all day, selling stamps and bonds throughout Bristol," stated a member of the committee. "The Girl Scouts, who formed a large portion of this group, were highly complimented also for their excellent work."

"Croydon and Bristol girls sold stamps and bonds for the boys who are fighting. These girls realize the great sacrifice the boys are making and they worked all day, but not in vain. Residents co-operated by buying not only from one girl, but in many instances bought from many."

"Bristol has throughout the war shown a true American spirit. After all, we must win, and to win we must help our government. We must not stop in our efforts—the boys cannot stop."

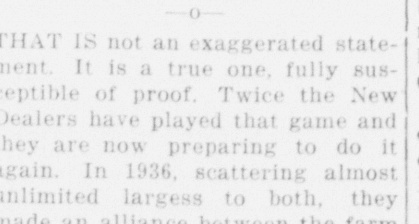

"Bring the war to a quick conclusion. Keep buying war bonds and stamps!"

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT
(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

The Same Old Game

Washington, Aug. 5. AS THE campaign for the fourth term progresses, the New Deal strategists are once more demonstrating their extraordinary ability to cover up political practices of an extremely unsavory nature with the pretense of purity. This, to be sure, is an almost invariable rule with all politicians in all campaigns.

BUT NEVER has it been developed with such high hypocrisy and skill as by the individuals who directed the 1936 and 1940 Roosevelt fights and who are now directing this one. Having twice proved the great gullibility of the American people, one hardly can blame them for thinking that there is no limit to it. With its glamorous leaders operating behind a screen of shining idealism and

Fruit-Drying Hints Are Given To The Housewife

STATE COLLEGE, Aug. 7.—(INS)—For the housewife who is contemplating drying fruits and vegetables at home, here are seven good tips from Lydia Tarrant and Eleanor Winters, nutrition specialists at the Pennsylvania State College.

- To dehydrate successfully, the housewife should:
1. Select top quality foods, clean well, and cut uniformly.
 2. Blanch or steam before drying.
 3. Dry quickly and evenly. This means starting vegetables in a pre-heated oven of 150 to 160 degrees and gradually decreasing the temperature to between 140 and 150 degrees. Fruits should be started at 160 to 175 degrees and the heat gradually reduced to 150 degrees during the drying process.
 4. Stir frequently to assure evenness of drying.
 5. Dry continuously. Do not dry partially and then finish the job later.
 6. Keep the air in the oven or cabinet drier in circulation.
 7. To test for dryness, squeeze a handful of dried fruit. If there is no moisture left on the hand and the fruit is springy and falls apart when pressure is released, like a handful of rubber bands, the fruit is properly dry. Berries and vegetables should be dry enough to rattle on trays.

All of the minerals in fruits and vegetables are preserved in the drying process, but vitamin content is reduced, the nutrition specialists said.

Tables and methods for drying may be obtained free on request of Circular 247 from the Agricultural Extension Service of the Pennsylvania State College.

Name I. J. VanArtsdalen Bucks County Solicitor

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 7.—Isaac J. VanArtsdalen, 63, prominent Doylestown attorney and senior member of the law firm of VanArtsdalen & Biester, has been appointed county solicitor to succeed the late Gordon H. Luckenbill, of Quakertown.

Attorney VanArtsdalen has been active in civic affairs of Doylestown for years. He is a native of Woodbourne, and attended the public schools of Bristol township. He studied law in the office of Ross & Long, here, and was admitted to the bar in 1902. In 1914 he formed a partnership with Judge Calvin S. Boyer before the latter became a member of the Bench in Bucks county.

The new county solicitor has served as a school board member and is a past president of the Doylestown chamber of commerce. He was the first president of the Kiwanis Club of Doylestown and is a prominent Mason.

TRANSPORT PLANES TO BE USED AFTER WAR IN RELIEF OF LIBERATED EUROPE AND ASIA

(Following is the fourth and last in a series of articles describing the work of Air Transport Command in the European Theater.—INS.)

By Lowell Bennett
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
LONDON, Aug. 7.—(INS)—American and British Air Transport Commands, now filling a vital supply and reinforcement role on every front, are headed for just as important a job in the post-war world, it was revealed here today.

Final victory will see vast fleets of transport aircraft concentrated on every battle-front, and final victory will bring a tremendous strain upon these forces to help out in the relief of stricken European and Asiatic populations, it was stated. Present plans for Britain's share of Air Transport aircraft do not entail their use as commercial cargo-carriers to compete with other Allied civilian airlines in a global trade rivalry. Air Transport Command, it was emphasized, is purely for military purposes.

But all possible advantage will be taken of cargo-carrying planes to fly medical supplies, trained personnel and equipment into liberated war zones where the civil population will be in so great need of outside relief help.

British Overseas Airways Corporation is the chief British civil air-line. It has no connection with British Air Transport Command, uses none of its planes or facilities and does not operate to the same end or by the same methods.

Fears in the United States and elsewhere that R. O. A. C. would employ U. S. Army transport planes to compete with American airlines in post-war trade are deprecated here in London. At the present time British Overseas Airways uses only British aircraft or those legitimately bought under civil contract from American aircraft manufacturers.

On the other hand, Air Transport Command, a branch of the British Air Ministry, employs hundreds of U. S. C-47 Skytrains, C-53 Dakotas, Lockheed Hudsons, B-17 Fortresses and B-24 Liberators, as well as a large number of British planes, in its world-wide operations.

These operations, it is stressed here, involve only military movements of material and personnel by air and are in no way connected with civil flying.

"Our Transport Command will remain as such after the war," declared one spokesman, "but only to maintain a balanced air force, not to help expand any civil air enterprise."

"Transport Command, even after the war ends, will have for its chief purpose a maintenance of the RAF's operational efficiency."

The speaker envisioned a "healthy international rivalry" in post-war air trade, rather than cut throat competition. "There seems to be far too much worry over our

"What Didn't Happen" —or— "I Wasn't There"

(By "The Stroller")
It must have been the heat, or sunburn! Anyhow—one of the Bristol Exchangeites who didn't attend the meeting that wasn't held, reported it as a grand success.

Let's see: It's hard for us to get this thing straight in our noodle—but we are informed by an "off-the-record" Exchange reporter that the notices went out for a session to be held on Thursday evening, August 12th. It was to be a social affair at the home of Walter Pitzonka, Bristol Township.

But three Exchangeites—either too anxious for the good time they anticipated, or eager to get away from their wives for an evening—journeyed to the Pitzonka farm on August 5th, being only seven days ahead of time!

Mr. Pitzonka, anxious to oblige his embarrassed guests, made them welcome, and with one club member being eager to see the farm, he was obligingly taken on a tour by Mr. Pitzonka.

So there was no session—merely a one-man, personally-conducted tour.

But the publicity chairman of Exchange, who didn't attend the meeting that wasn't held, reported to a representative of The Bristol Courier that a social session took place at the Pitzonka farm, he too being under the impression that August 5th was the designated date.

Just because he was talking to the Courier's fish reporter, he probably thought he would hand him a good line.

Air Raid Test at Noon Confusing To A Number

An uneventful air-raid test was held yesterday during the noon hour. The test was a complete surprise and for a time many were unaware that a test was being staged.

The Yellow signal was received here at 12 o'clock noon and at 12:14 the first Blue signal was given. The Red was sounded at 12:28 and the second Blue at 12:42. The All Clear was received at 12:58.

The blowing of the whistles was misunderstood by a number of people who were under the impression that it was the blowing of whistles by the industries for the noon hour. A number of whistles did not blow at all, it is contended.

Air raid wardens and emergency police, as soon as they were informed that it was a raid test, manned their posts. Traffic halted and the control center was staffed.

English Girl Aids Crop Harvest; Recalls "Blitz"

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., Aug. 6.—(INS)—Jeanne Hazlewood, a young British girl who lived in London through the worst of the bombings and who came to America on a convoy ship, has now joined the ranks of emergency workers on Chautauque county farm.

Jeanne can't keep her mind from wandering back to those days of terror nor can she forget her desire to get back into the thick of things, but while she's in America she's doing what she can to aid the victory efforts. She came with several school teachers from New York City to help out in the present labor crisis in this section.

Jeanne speaks proudly of her five brothers in the R. A. F., one a Japanese prisoner in Hong Kong, one in Ceylon, two in North Africa, and the fifth in training in Georgia. Her stepfather is an officer in the U. S. Navy.

When asked the stock question, "How do you like the United States?" Jeanne admitted it wasn't as she expected to find it.

"I expected to find everyone chewing gum, and Chicago full of gangsters." She expressed great enthusiasm for the American Jeep. "Those things can do anything," she said. "I think they could even fly."

The procedure engaged in by a reporter and photographer who wanted to interview the British girl was in itself something typical of America.

GRANGE PROTESTS THE EGG PRICE ROLL BACK

LANGHORNE, Aug. 7.—An answer to a telegram sent to "Don" Anderson, Washington egg price administrator, in protest against the roll back in egg prices was read at the meeting of Middletown Grange held Wednesday evening in the Langhorne Community House.

Administrator Anderson attempted to justify the egg ceiling by saying that the ratio of feed prices to egg prices was higher this year than it had been at this time in 1942.

"How to Overcome the Corn Shortage" was the topic of discussion during the remainder of the session, however, no definite conclusions were reached.

A "white elephant" sale with R. Walker Jackson acting as auctioneer, was the feature of the evening. A total of $8.50 was made to be used for war stamps.

Eisenhower Homestead Is at Elizabethtown

HARRISBURG, Aug. 7.—(INS)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower was born in Dennison, Tex., but the old Eisenhower homestead is at Elizabethtown, Pa., near the State Capital at Harrisburg. Built about 1860, it was the birthplace and childhood home of his father, David J. Eisenhower. Although it is no longer Eisenhower property, it has not been greatly altered by the present owner, Ira P. Romberger, former Dauphin County treasurer.

The outstanding feature of the nine-room house is the unusually large first floor room. The general's grandfather, Jacob Eisenhower, who built the house, designed it for a meeting place for the Brethren in Christ Church, a "plain" sect. He was a leader of church gatherings in his home during the Civil War period and up to the time he sold the property to Jeremiah Speck in 1878.

Speck's son, Isaiah, kept the 100-acre estate intact until his death in 1939, when Romberger acquired it. Since then some of the land has been sold, but nearly 70 acres remain.

The Eisenhowers moved to Kansas upon selling their home and never returned east to live. David Eisenhower moved to Texas, but went back to Kansas when his son was two years old. He returned in 1931 to see the house where he had been born in 1864, recognizing three boyhood friends while there.

The general's aunt, Mrs. Amanda Eisenhower Musser, who retains a great interest in her family homestead, also revisited it during the lifetime of Isaiah Speck. Later she corresponded with Romberger about it, mentioning a cobbler room in the attic where children's shoes were mended and a spring which supplied water for the household. She had searched for the spring during her visit and found it clogged with grass. Mrs. Musser also mentioned that the family had attended Upper Dauphin County school spelling bees.

She stated that the Eisenhower family had left the county in 1878 "and the ones who were then babies are now the old people and the Eisenhowers are forgotten."

General Eisenhower's father died in 1941. His 80-year-old mother resides in Abilene, Kansas. Besides his aunt, also of Abilene, he has two uncles, Abram, of Pasadena, Calif., and Ira, of Topeka, Kans.

The general has never visited the old homestead his grandfather built.

SATURATION BOMBING

Hamburg represents not the beginning of a change in Allied bombing technique, but the perfection. As a result of around-the-clock bombing of the second largest city in Germany by the RAF at night and by American Fortresses by day it has been practically obliterated.

Until about a year ago, Allied raids were directed against one city and then another. The tonnage of bombs was small and the rate of loss rather high. But in recent months the RAF and the American Air Force in Britain have been concentrating on one or two important cities, such as Cologne, Essen and Hamburg, before taking another, and by increasing bomb loads and attacking in mass have stepped up air power to a point where Major Seversky's ideas seem by no means fantastic.

Instead of scattering their bombing planes all over Europe, the Allies now are literally putting all their eggs in one basket. A city is raided again and again until the possibility of rebuilding it effectively before the war's end is negligible. Then another center of German "kultur" is singled out for attention while diversional raids are staged on other parts of Hitlerland.

One of the most encouraging factors in this technique is the decline of Allied losses. It is apparent that the Germans have lost defensive power. If the next twelve months show the same degree of increase in effectiveness of Allied bombing attacks as the last year has shown, the devastation of Germany will be an accomplished fact.

Bomb damage that is scattered can be remedied while pilots are engaged elsewhere, but a saturation bombing that is continued until the whole target area is demoralized leaves nothing on which to base a piece-meal repair program.

EAST INDIES OIL

In its report for the year the Royal Dutch Company, which owned the East Indies oil wells until the Japs took over, announces that wells and refineries in Netherlands possessions in that area were wrecked with few exceptions.

Of the four refinery centers in the Netherlands East Indies, three were completely destroyed. In the fourth center Jap paratroopers were dropped in the middle of the refinery. As a result of this attack, it was not possible to accomplish the destruction of the refinery as planned.

But it is known that the central power plant, the furnaces of the cracking plant and the central boiler plant were rendered useless and that the jetties were partly destroyed. Three thousand oil wells in the Netherlands possessions and in British territory of the Far East were wrecked or rendered useless to the enemy in one way or another.

The Royal Dutch Company reports that it has set aside its entire net income, together with dividends from subsidiaries, for reconstruction after the war. A reserve of 72,000,000 florins is now on hand. A florin is approximately fifty cents.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

ional following and even though the Republicans had a far stronger man.

IN THAT campaign he did not really need the city machines with which he had become allied, but he did need them in 1940. Without Eddie Kelly of Chicago, Eddie Flynn of Brooklyn, Frank Hague, of New Jersey, Joe Guifley, of Pennsylvania, and other of the machine-type bosses the phony third-term "draft" certainly could not have been put over. And though Mr. Roosevelt held the Negro vote, the farm vote and the labor vote, without these machines he could not have been elected. In brief, it was these city bosses who supported him for their own sordid reasons, and whom he had fattened with Federal patronage and favors who made the third term possible.

THAT IS a basic political fact which no informed person will dispute. And now, as 1944 approaches, the same game, differing only in detail, is being played. Again represented as the "Independent man," with heavy emphasis upon the necessity of not changing the "Commander in Chief" until the war is won and the peace made, a strong emotional plea is being made by Administration propagandists, while the practical fellows do their dealing under cover.

There is also the completely demagogic argument that unless Mr. Roosevelt is continued in power all our "social gains" will be lost and the Government taken over by those who put "property rights" above "human rights."

PROPERLY played up, these points are political assets of considerable weight. But they are not enough either to nominate or elect Mr. Roosevelt again—and every practical politician knows it. They know that this time the farmer-labor alliance can no longer be counted upon; that the farm vote is irretrievably lost; that the Negro vote though still strongly pro-Roosevelt, is less so than it was; that the small businessman has become disillusioned and that there is the accumulation of resentments inevitably created by a too long tenure of office. The job of the fourth-term managers is to offset these defections and they are going at it in an exceedingly practical way.

OF COURSE one thing upon which they properly count is the vast increase in the Federal jobholders—now more than 3,200,000. This means a lot, but it is not enough. Clearly, greater dependence than ever has got to be placed upon the big city machines and the radical groups. The recent enthusiastic endorsement by the official Communist organ of Mr. Frank Hague, on the general ground that because of his support of Mr. Roosevelt for a fourth term, they have to love him, illustrates what is going on underneath. And this alliance has been aided personally by the President, first, by a series of indefensible appointments for the Hagues, Kellys and Kennedys; second, by extreme coddling of the American Labor Party of New York, which controls 450,000 votes in the greatest State in the Union and is recognized as the most radical organization in America.

BUT, THE great glib American people are not supposed to know any of this. When the facts are presented they are told that they come from "Roosevelt haters." Then, the Federal jobholders in the various States rush to write denunciations to their local newspapers. All the people are expected to believe is that Mr. Roosevelt reluctantly will consent to run again because there is no one else to conclude the victory or make the peace. They are further expected to believe that he has banished politics from his mind and that his aides are all noble fellows whose only reason for staying in office is to serve the interests of the "common man." There was never anything farther from the truth. That they have gotten away with this bunk so long is no tribute to the intelligence of the people.

WILDCAT 13 by TOM GILL

CHAPTER THIRTY-EIGHT

Drew fought back his mounting anger. "You are the best judge of how this is going to look when it's aired in the courts. Politically it may not add to your prestige. Some may even accuse you of feathering your nest against the time when Alter's country will dominate Veragua."

Diaz's eyes began smoldering. "Do you believe that, Mr. Thorpe?" "What I believe isn't important. The facts are that as chief surgeon you run Franz Alter's hospital. As a national senator you give him oil concessions and privileges no other company enjoys. And now you plan to ruin me and present him with the Rio Bravo field—a field that I brought in after all the other companies had condemned it as worthless. Unless you have every newspaper in Veragua muzzled, Mr. Senator, you're going to have some difficulty explaining, for I promise you I'll make a howl that won't soon be forgotten. The people trust you and vote for you because they believe you're square. They believe you stand for law and order. They will look a little strange when they find that your good friend, Franz Alter, uses sabotage as his oil wells."

Carefully Diaz tapped the cigarette from his holder. "And you are prepared, I suppose, to prove all this?" "I caught a man red-handed last night in that very act. I have reason to think he'll talk."

"I doubt that he will say anything very alarming."

Drew seized his chance. "Then why not put it to the test? Come down to the well with me. Give me my day in court." Drew stopped, then casually he asked, "Or would you rather lead in tomorrow's papers what this fellow has to say?"

The eyes of the two men met, and very slowly Diaz laid down his cigarette. "Let me see this interesting person," he answered.

The hot silence of noon hung over the savanna when the two men reached the shack where Hank guarded the dock. Beckoning to Diaz, Drew stepped inside.

In the far corner Gloria sat, a tray on her lap; and, crouching close to her, Sergei was eating the first mouthful of food that day. As the two men entered, the Russian covered away, and Gloria rose. She kissed Drew, then looked expectantly up at her father; but, beyond a slight inclination of his head, Diaz gave no sign of recognition.

Bloodshot eyes dimmed with fear, Sergei watched Drew. "You got whisky?" he croaked; then disparagingly sank his face in his hands.

Gloria touched Drew's arm. "Try not to frighten him—he can't stand much more."

Drew turned to Diaz. "Most of my drilling troubles can be traced back to this man," he began. "He's lost tools down the well; he's failed to keep his pressure up; and twice he twisted off the drill stem. I should have kicked him out, but I simply didn't have time to get another driller. Last night he tried to dynamite the well, and when I caught him he pulled a knife on me." Drew stopped.

Sergei had crept close to Gloria. "Don't let them do anything to me," he begged. "Don't let them—"

Drew leaned over him. "Why did you try to dynamite the well, Sergei?"

Trembling the Russian pulled back. "I will not talk," he mumbled.

Gloria stepped between him and the watching men. She laid a reassuring hand on Sergei's head. "They won't hurt you," she promised.</

Wartime Ice Cream

North Americans are such lovers of ice cream that it rated a popular song several years ago. "I Scream For Ice Cream" was heard from coast to coast.

Today, even non-singers are screaming for ice cream. Dealers have a limited supply. Far too often the quality is not up to expectations. A nation of ice cream lovers is demanding good ice cream.

How can you satisfy the tastes of your family with what you are able to purchase? Well! A real wartime ice cream is possible. Heavy cream is not available but light cream will suffice. No eggs are needed, no cooking is necessary. Yet the ice cream is delicious.

An ordinary little household rennet tablet is responsible for this new ice cream — made in your automatic refrigerator. Just try the following recipe once — and your ice cream worries are over for the summer.

Wartime Vanilla Ice Cream (Automatic Refrigerator)

- 1 rennet tablet
- 1 tablespoon cold water
- 2 cups light cream
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 1/4 teaspoons vanilla

1. Dissolve rennet tablet by crushing in cold water.
2. Mix light cream, sugar and vanilla. Warm slowly, stirring constantly. When COMFORTABLY WARM, (110° F.) not hot, remove at once from heat.
3. Add dissolved rennet tablet and stir quickly for a few seconds only. Pour at once, while still liquid, into refrigerator tray. Let stand at room temperature until set — about 10 minutes.
4. Place in freezing compartment. Freeze until firm. Remove from tray to a bowl, break up with a fork and beat with electric or rotary beater until free from hard lumps but still a thick mush. Finish freezing. Top each dish with a few nut meats before serving.

We thank Thee, O Father, for thy care and sustenance, for the fact that thou dost hold us up with thine eternal arms, for the fact that thou dost always lead us through the hard paths of life. Indeed, O God, we realize more than ever before our complete need of Thee and Thy strength. We know now our complete helplessness and we recognize the absolute failure of man's efforts outside the plan of God. Bring us into that full association with Thee which will enable us to depend upon thee at all times. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

"Flight for Freedom," the new Rosalind Russell-Fred MacMurray starring vehicle which came to the screen of the Grand Theatre yesterday, is a remarkable picture in two respects.

Not only is the offering a most colorful romantic drama, but it also possesses unique documentary atmosphere in that it reveals a long-cherished Navy secret, a secret that could not have been told before Pearl Harbor.

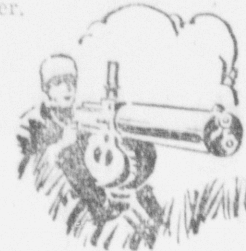

The romance is a three-way affair between the charming Toni Carter, ambitious girl pilot; the dashing Randy Britton, world-famous flyer, and Paul Turner, Toni's flying teacher and financial backer.

Ethel Waters, star of the stage play, makes a spectacular screen appearance in "Cabin in the Sky," in which she plays her original role of Petunia. In the picture, which comes Sunday to the Grand Theatre, she sings the title song and several other numbers.

PORT DIX POST NINE WILL CLASH WITH FLEETWINGS HERE

Six Team Will Oppose The Local Nine on H. S.
Field Monday

GAME STARTS AT 6.30

Visitors Have Several Well-Known Former Semi-
Pro Ball Players

For the second time this season the Fort Dix Post team will clash with the Fleetwings Arrows baseball team. The Dix team will travel down from New Jersey on Monday evening, when they meet the Arrows on the Bristol High School field. The game will begin promptly at 6.30 p. m.

The Arrows, who in their last contest held the very strong Trenton State Prison Officers' team to a 3-3 tie, will be at their best against the Post team. Dix has several well-known former semi-pro ballplayers on their team and will no doubt be geared to do their best. On the former occasion the Dix Post team played the Arrows they lost a closely contested ball game by a 3-0 score. They will be seeking revenge on Monday evening.

BLACK METEORS TO OPPOSE BRISTOL A. A.

The Bristol A. A. baseball team will travel to Phila. tomorrow afternoon to play the strong Black Meteors at 26th and Johnson Sts., in a double header, first game starting at 1.30 p. m.

Lonnie Heisler and Danny Keenan will work for the A. A. Club. The local club will leave Bristol at 12.15 p. m. Sunday afternoon. Several of the A. A. players are on vacation. Their position will be filled temporarily by several new players.

Transport Planes To Be Used After War for Relief

future relationships on the basis of usurpation of air-trade routes," he declared.

Moreover, it is thought here that the airplane will not eliminate the sea-going merchant ship and tanker as the chief freight carrier, at least in the predicable future.

Substantiation for this claim, antithetical to many made in the United States by air enthusiasts, was given by a practical example of air-versus-sea cargo transport:

A merchant vessel of average size will carry 8,000 tons of freight from New York to Liverpool in five days, unloading in two days, return with another 8,000 tons in another five days, unloading it in two days, thereby transferring 16,000 tons of cargo in fourteen days, for a few thousand gallons of relatively cheap Diesel fuel.

In theoretic competition, it would take 100 cargo-planes, capable of carrying 4 tons of freight each on such a long trip, four trans-Atlantic flights each to carry an equal amount of freight. This would mean, at best, four days—a saving of ten days time.

But, it is pointed out, the 100 cargo-planes would expend something like ten million gallons of 100 per cent octane gasoline in those trips—or nearly two large tanker loads.

Those 10,000,000 gallons of fuel would have to be transported by sea to Britain anyway, since this country has no natural oil sources of any consequence. Therefore, it is urged, while air trade may work with sea trade, it is hardly plausible that it will usurp any large percentage of the world's gross overseas cargo volume.

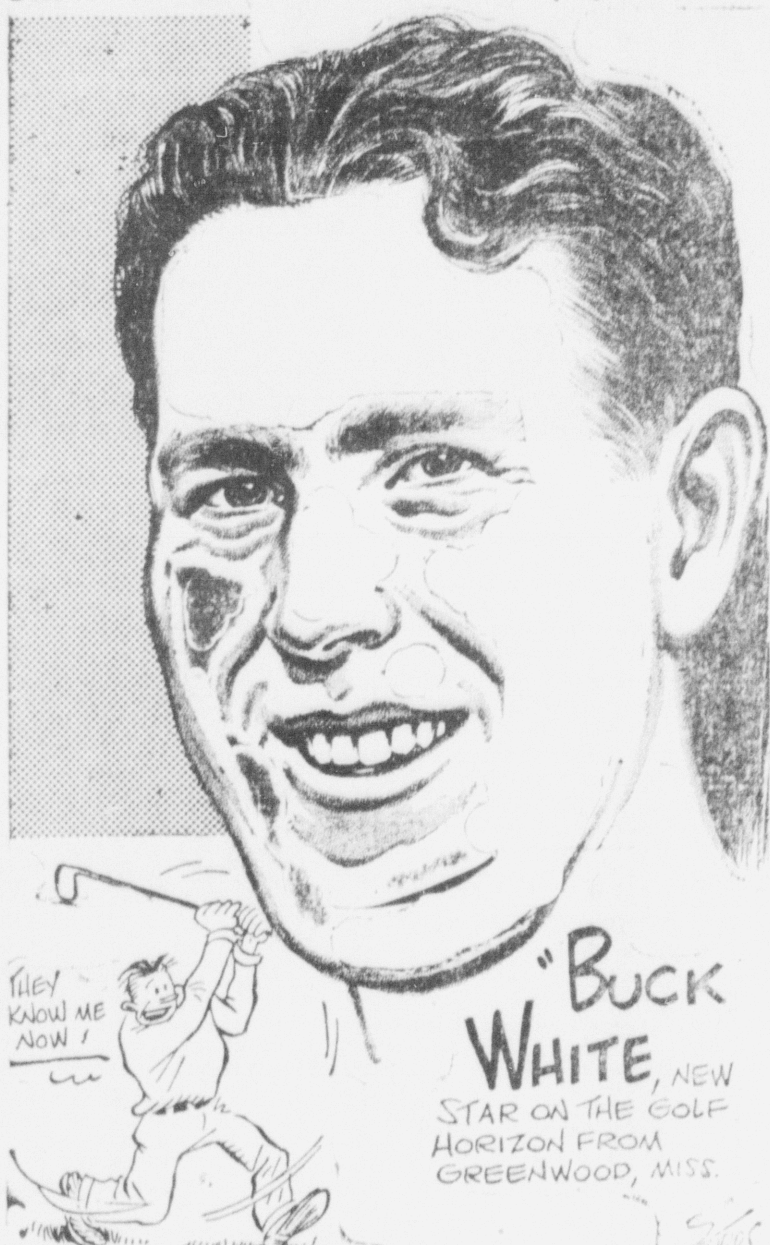

The same spokesman pictured international air trade competition as "probably paralleling sea trade during the last 20 years . . . the best airline will get the best trade, the best service will get the most customers."

"At the same time," he noted, "Britain, America and Russia have each, by nature of their location, certain spheres of influence in territories adjacent to their own."

"I believe it is quite possible that American airlines will control about one fifth of the world's air trade. British Empire lines another fifth, and Russian organizations still another fifth. That will leave forty per cent, some of which will be taken up by other nations such as France and Holland, but it will leave a large margin in which a healthy international rivalry can work."

The war's end ought to see the use of whole fleets of transport planes for relief purposes, if plans laid here in Britain and in Washington come to fruition. Ships, obviously, will carry most of the heavy food and clothing consignments, and there will be a great need for the transport of relief personnel and Allied administrative and police officials.

trimmed with lace. It had long sleeves ending in points. Small pearl rosettes adorned the front of the bodice. A long veil was held in place by a halo of orange blossoms. She wore white stain slippers, and carried a large shower bouquet of white roses with an orchid in the center.

The bride chose as her maid of honor her sister, Miss Anna Benneman, who wore a gown of soft yellow moire taffeta made with sweetheart neckline and three-quarter length sleeves. Her headpiece was a crown of flowers with short veil. She carried a bouquet of mixed flowers.

One of the bridesmaids, Miss Virginia Clifford, Philadelphia, wore a gown cut on the same lines as that of the maid of honor, but of blue tone. The other bridesmaids, Mrs. Jean Bellam and Miss Marie Adams, Philadelphia, sister of the groom, wore gowns of taffeta, Princess style, with sweetheart neckline and short puffed sleeves. They wore headpieces of flowers with short veils, and carried bouquets of mixed flowers. Slippers were silver for all bridesmaids and the maid of honor.

Dolores Bahr served as the flower girl. She was attired in a shepherdess dress of blue taffeta, ankle length, trimmed with pink bows on the bodice. Her headpiece was a halo of pink and blue. She carried an old fashioned nosegay.

The groom had as his best man his brother, Mr. Charles Adams, Croydon Manor; and as ushers Mr. Joseph Adams, Wissinoming; and Mr. Walter Barner, Jr., Croydon. A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents on Walnut avenue. The bridal couple will leave for a ten days' trip to the Pocono Mountains. They will make their home in a newly-furnished apartment in Holmesburg.

The bride's traveling attire was a white jersey dress, with red figures and white accessories.

The groom's mother was attired in a gown of light blue crepe with white accessories. She wore a corsage of pink roses. The bride's mother wore a dress of navy blue dotted jersey, with navy and white accessories. She wore a corsage of white roses.

come to the attention of an announcer.

The broadcasting business is comparatively new, being only between 20 and 25 years old, yet it has already undergone many changes and improvements.

"Station WIP," he said, "has 60 people on the payroll, including eight announcers, 17 engineers, an orchestra, news staff and several librarians."

Nearly all radio material is read over the air, though a few announcers are able to ad lib successfully.

The Perkase-Telford W. C. T. U. held its annual business meeting and election at the home of Mrs. Eugene Clair, recently.

Officers were elected as follows: President, Mrs. Kathryn Erisman; vice-president, Mrs. J. F. White; secretary, Miss Ada M. Landis; corresponding secretary, Miss Fannie E. Landis; and treasurer, Miss Anna M. Swigert.

The Warrington Junior Women's Club held a picnic at the home of Henry Gargis, Warrington, a few nights ago with the feature of the evening being a "point-luck" supper.

About 60 members attended the affair which was in charge of Mrs. Arnold Blythe. Guests included Douglas Clark, U. S. N., who is stationed at Sampson, N. Y.; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Clark; and Miss Maudie Clark, New York City, and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Holbert, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. William Munz, Warrington.

A treasure hunt was the main feature of the evening's entertainment.

August 15th. In case of rain the program will take place on the following Sunday. The committee requested that borough council be represented at the affair.

George Bittle, health officer, reported that waste water from household sinks in some instances is draining into the streets. The ordinance governing such conditions is to be enforced the health officer and council members agreed.

The patching of some streets in the borough has gotten underway, and will be completed within a month, Mr. Keating reported.

Report was made to the group that thieves have stolen many vegetables from some Victory gardens, with a few of the patches being utterly ruined. The perpetrators of the thefts have not been apprehended.

The balance from last month reported in the treasury was $2467.42. Delinquent taxes collected totalled $17.85; and current taxes, $1884.36. Bills ordered paid reached $335.41, leaving a treasury balance of $1034.22.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Gas: $100 per Hour

One four-motored bomber burns up $100 worth of high octane gas an hour on flights over German territory. Hitler doesn't like it, so Goebbels is writing letters of complaint. Something should be done about it. We ought to buy more War Bonds to buy more bombers.

To keep our "air umbrella" over Nazi-land requires thousands and thousands of planes and millions of barrels of gasoline and ton upon ton of TNT. The War Bonds you buy will help a lot. "Figure It Out Yourself."

Russian Armies Are Still Surging Forward

Americans, probably realizing that this was their last stand before falling back toward Messina.

It was a delaying action, pure and simple, according to International News Service war correspondent Clark Lee, who is right up in the front lines, but the Germans are masters at such actions. Fully aware they face ultimate defeat, they are battling tooth and nail to forestall the inevitable for as long as humanly possible and thereby perhaps enable some of the forces to do a "Dunkirk" across the Messina Strait to the Italian mainland.

Allied air forces gave the retreating Nazis no respite, pounding incessantly at their fortified positions and lines of communication.

Ground forces, at some points, were believed to be less than 50 miles from Messina, the last escape port open to the enemy that offers any possibility of defense.

From London, meanwhile, came the interesting report, by way of Turkey, that the Nazis are planning to declare Berlin an open city. With the population of Berlin said to be in a state of near-panic as a result of the terrible destruction wreaked on the great seaport of Hamburg, only 178 miles away, dispatches from Istanbul said the Germans were planning to move their government offices to Dresden, Leipzig, Munich and possibly even Prague.

Swiss reports, quoting travelers from Germany, declared that a great exodus from Berlin had already started. And from no less a person than Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels himself came the statement that Germans should keep their morale in 1943 as the British did during the Nazi blitz of 1940.

From Switzerland, too, came word that German Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop was conferring somewhere in northern Italy with the new Italian foreign minister, Ruffale Guariglia. Their decision, it was said, would probably decide Italy's future course in the war.

Tension increased between Germany and Sweden when a German merchant ship was reported to have fired upon and damaged a Swedish reconnaissance plane in the Gulf of Bothnia.

American forces that captured the Japanese air base at Munda mopped up isolated pockets of enemy resistance in the nearby jungles, while American airmen carried out heavy new aerial attacks on other Jap bases in the Solomons and on New Guinea.

In a dogfight between 16 American fighters and 30 Japanese planes, seven of the enemy were shot down while only one American plane was lost. The Japanese radio ignored the fall of Munda, but boasted that Japan had crushed the combined naval forces of the United States and Great Britain in the first battle of the Solomons a year ago.

It was not the first time the Japs have made such a sweeping claim and it will probably not be the last.
